God And Empire Jesus Against

The Romans executed Jesus because he preached this Kingdom of God, a kingdom based on peace and justice, over the empire of Rome, which ruled by violence and force. For Jesus and Paul, Crossan explains, peace cannot be won the Roman way, through military victory, but only through justice and fair and equal treatment of all people.

God and Empire: Jesus Against Rome, Then and Now: Crossan ...

God and Empire is a good introduction to Crossan's view of Jesus as a non-violent 'peace by justice' figure. Those who have read other works by Crossan will be familiar with this characterization, but this book gives it a solid foundation in historical and biblical accounts of Jesus' life and time, and includes an amusing and enlightening juxtaposition of the titles of Roman Imperial theology ...

God and Empire: Jesus Against Rome, Then and Now by John ...

Crossan makes it clear that Jesus stood against violence; the world run by Rome and the world as it would be run if God were in charge are radically different. Jesus stood as a signpost of that world and his message of love and radical equality cause friction then, as it does now.

He sees Jesus as part of a Jewish tradition of resistance to Babylonian, Roman, and other empires. Crossan recognizes violence in some of that tradition but he emphasizes (rightly) that Jesus stands as the fulfillment of the nonviolent strand. Resisting the violence of empire while standing for justice therefore lie at the heart of Jesus's message.

The Bible presents us with both a peaceful God and a violent God, declares Crossan (In Search of Paul, 2004, etc.).The task of believers is to decide which one to follow. Exploring history with a special emphasis on Rome's quintessential empire, the author concludes that "civilization" consists largely of competing empires.

GOD AND EMPIRE by John Dominic Crossan | Kirkus Reviews

During his time on Earth, Jesus Christ was neither weak nor submissive. Jesus Christ fought hard against corruption and big government, speaking out against the abuses of the Roman Empire and the hypocrisies of the religious ruling elite. Today, Christ's resurrection is something we can have great faith in.
