The woman didn't give up easily. "The public deserves to know the truth. And if there is a vigilante killer, a serial vigilante killer, they should be warned." Maybe they did deserve to know. But flashing that story all over the media would create panic and possibly cause the killer to bolt. Korine didn't want any more murders.

"You're so pretty, oh, so pretty . . ." The door screeched open. Daddy had closed it when they'd come into his study. Something shiny glinted against the darkness. Her daddy didn't seem to notice. He spun her around again. Her dress whirled around her, the petticoat beneath crinkling. A loud popping noise made her jump.
