The Blessing Way Navajo Mysteries

Tony Hillerman's first Leaphorn mystery (1970) strikes me as one of his best in its balance of mystery, crime solving, and rich cultural background—an authorial creation of hoozho, that guiding principle of Dinee life, which the Blessing Way ceremony (hoozhoji) restores and maintains. The book's title may refer less to the ceremony itself (which, in fact, the book scarcely mentions) than to the principle that guides detective Joe Leaphorn's pursuit of a solution to crime.

The Blessing Way (Leaphorn & Chee, #1) by Tony Hillerman

The Blessing Way is the first in this series and I felt the officer might like a read by an author known and celebrated as a mystery writer who set plot within a realistic framework of life in the desert of Arizona and New Mexico that is the Navajo Nation. I mailed the book to the office at his last know station. I know the book arrived.

The Blessing Way by Tony Hillerman is the first book in the Navajo mysteries series. This book was a jumbled mess to put it politely. The description of the setting was beautiful. However, that was the only bright spot of this book. I don't think Hillerman knew who was an important character as it seemed he was all over the place.

Tony Hillerman's The Blessing Way is much more than a mystery - it is a book that allows a close up look at the Navajo and the southwest. The mystery is great and holds the readers interest, but the reader is also taken to a place of enchantment, where one can almost feel the wind and see the beautiful, but barren, landscape.
