I think I say the "You don't have to like it, you just have to do it" to my kids, too, and I'm pretty sure my mom said it to me. Most of my kids are younger, so a lot of times I do things with them if they are really in a funk about doing them. I know that when I really, really don't want to do something—assuming it's a normal ...

You start to obsess over the fact that you don't like them and feel like you're crying wolf every single time you present new evidence that screams that that person isn't all sugar and spice. Yet, it seems like it falls on deaf ears. I knew a girl once that was the perfect child to virtually everyone. She volunteered, loved church, loved little ...

You Don't Have To Like Everyone

Question: "Is it possible to love a person without liking that person?" Answer: The Bible tells us that God's will is for us to love other people with a godly love. We are called to "love your neighbor as yourself" (Luke 10:27) and even to "love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who curse you, pray for those who mistreat you" (Luke 6:27-28).

Is it possible to love a person without liking that person ...

That person you don't like is not intrinsically a bad human. The reason you don't get along is because you have different values, and that difference creates judgment. Once you accept that not everyone will like you, and you won't like everyone because of a difference in values, the realization can take the emotion out of the situation.

How Smart People Deal With People They Don't Like

We all have to get through things we don't like in life, be it small or big. Perhaps having to go through a tough set of exams, a driving test or a holiday with someone you really don't like. In many cases, there's little we can do to change outside factors, but we can certainly get through it all in a less stressful way.
